The “Folies Montpelliéraines” used to be pleasure residences for the Languedocian’s aristocracy. They are fully part of the culture and history of Montpellier. Those houses, which belong to the counsellor of the Court of Counts and Finance of Languedoc, experienced a golden age during the first half of the 18th century. The Château de Flaugergues is one of the first of these.

Bought and rearranged by Etienne de Flaugergues in 1696, the château still remains a family house. Henri de Colbert, a descendant of Etienne de Flaugergues and Jean-Baptiste Colbert’s family (minister of Louis XVI), is now the owner of the Château. He moved inside the house with his family in 1973 when he inherited the place. Since then, he dedicated his life to open his house to whoever wants to discover it.

The castle is also known for its vineyards. Old of 2000 years, the vines were already cultivated by the Romans et later by monks during the 12th century.

Nowadays, Flaugergues is an example of local heritage, animated with passion by the family and Flaugergues’ team who share the art of “good and beautiful” for their visitors’ pleasure.

The Château de Flaugergues is an exceptional place, which allows you to enjoy walks in the gardens, guided tours of the castle and the cellar with a wine tasting, but also to appreciate theatres under the stars and other cultural events!

Heritage, botany, wine tourism and gastronomy...: everyone can find their own pleasure in Flaugergues. Why not discover the castle accompanied by a tour guide, before enjoying a delicious meal in our Folia restaurant and a glass of wine produced by the owner’s son?
